

University of Alberta to Have Department of Agriculture

hundred and fifty men during the year, and in the next few days were admitted. In addition, 22,000 persons had attended the lectures given by the department during the year, and had heard lectures and seen war. The university had sought not only to stimulate the interest of students in an accurate knowledge of conditions. Twenty-four professors who had already gone to the front together with three members of the faculty had given their services in the actual work of war.

Take Hospital Training.
Not only that, but the medical students had taken the training necessary to make them efficient hospital attendants. They had taken their places in the scene of active service, and had been able to take a position to offer a fully equipped hospital, to take its place in the field of war. It was to be regretted that up to the present time no one had been able to accept the offer, but he hoped that before long the medical students would be able to take their places in the scene of active service, and that they would be ready to offer a fully equipped hospital to the country and the provinces.

Another important point was that the university had manufactured vaccines against typhoid and distributed them to all the soldiers who had gone from the pro-considered as the chief aim of the student. They were a necessary evil, and in the regular way of examinations, but useful as a rough test of a student's progress and an aid in the preparation of his examinations.

Research Must Take Precedence.
Beside teaching, however, research must take a prominent place in the work of every university. A research work, which made no attempt to extend the field of knowledge was a waste of time and energy. The results of the past made itself especially evident in the field of agriculture, in which the first importance was given to the results of research, with little if any guidance and encouragement given to the students.

In the direction of research and independent research, the present educational system of reading and examination most certainly does not encourage a spirit of research. One way of bringing about a spirit of research is to make individual research an indispensable condition of proceeding.

The individual research of the student, the individual training of the student, the individual dependence of thought, especially the power of initiation and of original research, are the true marks of a creative habit of mind and that facility which makes the student more important in the face of the complex problems of the world.

Above all things, a practical study of natural phenomena should become an essential part of their university course. The student should learn that nobles of our faculties, the power of the mind in man, and the nobility of man in the world.

Affiliation Increases.
Notwithstanding the adverse conditions, the number of students increased over the previous year—443 men and 112 women, or 10 per cent. increase. Of these, twenty were graduating students, 32 in their fourth year, 106 in their third, 146 in their second year, and 168 in their first year. Three hundred and thirty-three of the students were sons and daughters of the students who had been born in the province, and 160 in the rest of the world.

The students came from 47 different countries, and it was shown that the influence of the university was being extended to all sections of the world.

Great Success.
Great success had attended the organization, which was now in its second year. During the year negotiations had been carried on with several Toronto universities with a view to securing the services of the best courses of medicine at these universities. The result of these negotiations is that this year in Alberta the students will complete their course where they were to have completed it at the universities that had agreed to take Alberta students. The students came from 47 different countries, and it was shown that the influence of the university was being extended to all sections of the world.

Union Jack Prize.
The Union Jack Prize was given to the winner of the Alberta Women's association gold medal.

He remarked that the university now had passed its first year, and had graduated from the institution who had graduated from the institution.

Algebraic Association.
Alberta Women's Association of Arts and Sciences—Miriam Lois Morris, awarded by reversal of Dr. Morris.

Prizes.
The English Literature—John G. Hartley, Bishop's University; Harold Russell Leaver, St. Paul's School.

Union Jack Prize.
The Union Jack Prize was given to the Daughters of Empire, presented by the principal of the provincial college of education, and the head teacher appointed, and would be on the ground in a few days. One of his friends said that the students had been dismissed and there remained but one student, and that he had been given the order of education—and he hoped they would be able to realize that as a

In conclusion, there was great surprise at the fact that Oxford had conferred

Mr. Justice Sturtz, chancellor of the university, with the degree of honorary LL.D., and the ceremony to take place at the university on May 21st.

Conclusion.
The convocation address was delivered by Prof. Lewis, who, saying that the recent achievements indicated the city must develop, if it is to take its place among the older universities of the world.

Prof. Boyle, minister of education, in a short speech, spoke of splendid progress and on the large class of young men and women who were to receive their degrees at the university.

He hoped to see many of the men and women who had attained an eminence in the province, and the students who had graduated who were broad-minded and able to meet the world with a certain degree of humanity and common sense, and to bear their share in the future of the nation.

Look to Great Future.
"We look forward with high hopes and a strong heart to the great future that lies before us."

The National Anthropological Society concluded the most interesting session of the year, and the services were afterwards served, and in the evening the graduate students entertained their friends.

SCONA CHORAL SOCIETY TO SING "CANON."

The Strathcona Choral Society will sing "Canon" at the Royal Alexandra on Friday evening in the Metropolitan Methodist church, South Side. The program includes "Tubal Cain." This is a descriptive piece in sonata form, the solo part being for a smith, forging weapons for which he brings a clamorous crowd, who are given to shouting, clapping, and gifts and gold. Tubal, however, on realization of his workmanship, loses the lust of carnage and bewails that his skill has been used for evil purposes. While he ponders, his furnace dies down, and the energy and the sparks fly again met-
